is not fully understood by most persons. It is on the "balances," for instance, which banks get the use of for nothing and which is loaned out by them at interest that a bank is supported.
WE issue "certificates of deposits" on which we pay 3 per cent, payable on demand, 4 per cent in three menths, 5 per cent in six months or 6 per cent in one year. As banks are maintained and supported mainly by the interest received on coars you can readily understand the advantages we offer to investors in our "certificates of deposit," which are made payable at the time which most suits their convenience.

A Baltimore dispatch, reviewing the matter, says: During the reform campaign of 1885 the most bitter things were said of Gorman by his opponents, but the most cutting were those uttered on the stump by Findlay, who went so far as to say that "the only good Gorman was a dead Gorman." The regular democratic orators and organs charged him with inciting the assassination of Gorman, and he published a card explaining that he meant to urgeonly Gorman's political death. He continued, however, to denounce Gorman as a political trickster and "archboss," who was following in the wake of the ship of state for what he could pick up.

strike out from the bill the provision which still makes the sciling of liquor within a mile of Soldiers' Home unlawful. In support of that amendment he had read the letter of Gen. Kelton, the commandant of the home, urging the repeal of that law. This letter has heretofore been printed in The Star.

MAKE IT HALF A MILE.

Mr. Faulkner offered as a substitute that the limit distance be made a half a mile. He thought the District committee would agree to Huguenots, who were driven to America about thought the District committee would agree to this. He believed that something should be 1632 by the edict of Nantes. His father, Wilson Olney, was cashier of the Oxford (Mass.) Bank and done to close the vicious saloons and gambling hells at the gates of Soldiers' Home, but the mile limit was too great, as it came down into the city limits too far.

Mr. Butler asked whether the objections of Gen. Kelton would not hold as well against the batt-mile limit as the mile limit was considered whether the objections of Gen. Kelton would not hold as well against the lateral of the state and a now prominent lawyer there, and

This was the year in which there was a grand overturn in state politics there was a grand overturn guestion. William and this fact was discovered by the attorneys of men who in defiance of the one-mile limit had opened saloons in that very vicinity. As a consequence there were more saloons now near the Soldiers' Home than ever before.

Mr. Butler was of the opinion that the subjection of these saloons to a license fee of $400 would close many of these small shops in the neighborhood of the home.
